Local Chapter O.E.S. Celebrate Anniversary

In celebrating the 25th anniversary of the institution of their lodge, the members of Connaught chapter, O.E.S., on Wednesday evening last, in the Masonic hall, opened the proceedings with a sumptuous banquet at 6.30 p.m. at which Mrs. A. Lundy, of Lethbridge, worthy grand matron of Alberta (who was also making her annual official visit to this chapter), Mrs. M. Cullens, of Edmonton, P.G.M., Mrs. L. I. Kenny, of Wainwright, P.G.M., and Mr. R. H. Ennismore, G.S., were honored guests.

At the close of the banquet, the degree work of the order was splendidly exemplified by the local degree staff, and favorably commented upon by the official visitors.

During the evening, on behalf of the past matrons of Connaught chapter, Mrs. Kenny in a fitting speech made the presentation of a beautifully bound bible to the lodge as a suitable memento of the anniversary occasion, and congratulations upon this length of service to the order were read from Vancouver, Hamilton, Melville, Okotoks and Lethbridge.

All present were in accord in voting this one of the most pleasant affairs experienced in the history of the chapter.

W.M.S. Hold Thank Offering Meeting

The Autumn thank offering service of the United church Women's Missionary society was held in the local church on Thursday evening October 15th.

Beside the members and the United church friends of the auxiliary, quite a number from the other churches attended, also the C.G.I.T. with their leader Miss Darrah.

The service of worship was inspiring and solos by Mrs. C. McKenzie and Mrs. Coursier were much enjoyed.

The guest speaker of the evening was Miss Constance Griffiths of Toronto secretary of Young People's work in connection with missions. She gave a very interesting resume of her work, told of the various school homes, social settlement houses, etc., under the auspices of the United church W.M.S. and challenged the members to go forward and do their utmost to make life more like the ideal Jesus set.

Mr. Chas. Johnson, who recently purchased an acre of land just east of town is erecting a small house for a home there. Mr. Johnson has been in charge of the Alberta Pacific elevator in town for the past six months.

FEDERAL GOV'T ANNOUNCES NEW BIG HOUSING SCHEME

Planned to loan up to hundred million dollars if necessary; should aid all branches building trades.

OTTAWA.—Fifty million dollars is to be made available immediately for Canadian home owners who may wish to remodel or renovate their homes. Announcement of the renovation program was made here on Friday by Hon. C. A. Dunning, minister of finance. The program is expected not only to take care of home-owners' requirements but to give a much needed impetus to the building trades and provide work during the winter for thousands of Canadian mechanics. If necessary the fifty million dollars will be made one hundred millions to take care of the work, and the money will be available immediately.

Under the scheme outlined it will be possible for home-owners to add rooms to their houses, put in bath rooms, new plumbing and other up-to-date fixtures; to remodel the home entirely; put on a new roof or paint and clean-up the premises and secure the necessary money for that purpose through federal government aid.

No minimum amount is fixed for the loan although the maximum for each home-owner is $2,000. Under the scheme as outlined the government guarantees the banks of Canada against loss up to 15 per cent, and the money will be loaned out by the banks to any housekeeper in good standing without security or endorsements at a discount rate of 3½ per cent. The loans are to be repaid in twelve monthly instalments.

Here's how the scheme will work. A homeowner needing $100 for repairs to his home will be able to give the bank a note for this amount. For the note he will receive $96.75 in cash, and he will pay back the loan in instalments of $8.07 a month for twelve months. Larger loans will be handled in a similar manner with amounts in proportion and if necessary repayments can be spread over a five-year term.

The plan as outlined is the result of an arrangement between the government and the National Employment commission, headed by Arthur B. Purvis of Montreal, who has been the prime mover on one side and the Canadian Bankers' association on the other.

An important feature of the undertaking is that people who make these improvements shall not be penalized by the municipality putting on higher taxes on the ground that the property is appreciated by the renovation. The banks are given every credit for their co-operation in the scheme. The government guarantees any loss up to 15 per cent.

General conditions which the lending institutions will have to meet to obtain the government guarantee are as follows:

1. Loans are to be made to owners of residential property (including farm houses) for repairs, alterations and additions including built-in equipment.

2. Loans shall not exceed $2,000 in amount on any single property. More than one loan may be made on a single property if the aggregate amount does not exceed $2,000.

3. Loans are to be repaid in equal monthly instalments or in suitable instalments for such other periods as may be necessary to fit the conditions of the individual borrower.

4. The maximum charge for the loans shall be 3½ per cent discount for a one-year loan repayable in equal monthly instalments and proportionate rates for other periods.

5. No service or insurance charges or any additional charges of any kind may be made except certain stipulated penalties for arrears.

6. No endorsements or other security will be required.

"While the present arrangement has been worked out with the chartered banks only," said Mr. Dunning, "similar arrangements may later be made with other lending institutions which are able and willing to "make housing modernization loans on the conditions outlined above. The government reserves the right to announce at any time that no further loans will be guaranteed for all lending institutions or for any particular institution."

Horrors of Great War Re-Lived in Pictures

In the wonderful war picture "Lest We Forget" which is showing at the Elite theatre for four shows this week-end, the gallant Canadian Corps has mobilized once more in another "war to end war," and they go over the top again in one of the most dramatic battles ever waged in behalf of peace.

"Lest We Forget" is Canada's own war memorial, compiled and produced through the joint sponsorship of the Canadian government and the Canadian Legion.

It is an epic of heroism, self-sacrifice, and almost incredible endurance. It is war minus its brass buttons and false glamour.

The picture does not glorify war. What glory in the spectacle of shattered fragments that once were men filling the trenches on Vimy? What glamour in the torn remnants of manhood staggering back from the mass massacre at Cambrai? What thrill—other than that of sheer horror—in the spectacle of the Canadian Base Hospital at Etaples? What glorification of any part of the ghastly, stupid carnage, when the crosses of seventeen million hero dead cast their blight over the whole scene?

Canada's warrior sons will relive those four terrible years once more as the all-seeing eyes of the official army cameras bridge the gap of a quarter of a century. They will feel the deadly chill of Messines' trenches. The horrors of Passchendaele will be revived.

The Legion's picture is rich in personalities. One sees the aged Emperor Franz Josef of Austria, a figure bowed with tragedy, which culminated in the assassination of his heir apparent at Sarajevo, in June, 1914.

Pompous and flamboyant, ex-Kaiser Wilhelm reviews his Prussians before dispatching them to fight his battles, to imitate those four years of suffering and destruction which will require the work of many future generations to repair. The weakling Czar of Russia whose last distressed years were to end with his murder at the hands of his own subjects, is seen in the heyday of Muscovite glory. King Albert of Belgium, the citizen-king dedicated to peace, has the uneasy air of one in a strange setting when he surrounds himself with soldiers and starts them off to the Liege forts.

"Lest We Forget" successfully compresses within its limited scope the story not only of Canada and Canadian achievement in the war but of the Great War itself. A Canadian picture, compiled for Canadian eyes and for the instruction of Canadians, its sequences bring out Canadian effort, but also do full justice to others.

Silver Wedding Festivities Add Pleasure to Nuptials

On Monday, Oct. 12th, at St. Thomas' church, Wainwright, was solemnized one of the prettiest weddings of the season, when Mr. T. Shaw of the Battle Heights district, gave his daugher in marriage to Mr. Leonard Price, of Camrose. Miss Shaw was simply but beautifully gowned in white crepe-back satin, her long flowing veil being held in place by a coronal of orange blossoms. White gloves, shoes and stockings, completed her bridal array, with crystal ear-rings her only ornament. She carried a lovely bouquet of Talisman roses and fern.

Miss Ellen Shaw attended as sister and looked charming in pink crepe de chine with hat to match, and white accessories. She carried an arm bouquet of pink and white carnations.

The bridegroom, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Price of Mosbrough, Derbyshire, England, was supported by Mr. Robert Dempsey of Irma. A large number of relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony which was performed by the Rural Dean, Rev. C. N. Bateman. The wedding music was played by Mrs. C. N. Bateman.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. T. Shaw, who on that date celebrated their silver wedding as well as the wedding of their daughter.

It was on October 12th, 1911, when Mary Ellen Hartshorn became the bride of Thomas Shaw of Hatton in her own parish church of Church Broughton, Derbyshire. In 1925 Mr. and Mrs. Shaw came to Canada with their six children and made their home in the Battle Heights area. The following year another son, Robert, was born to them. All their children were present for the festivities including Mrs. H. Armitage of Irma, who is a twin sister to Mrs. Leonard Price, and Tom, Sid, Ellen, Edith and Robert, also two grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw with Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Price were very charming and hospitable hosts and hostesses. Mrs. Shaw was very smart in a gown of Bordeau crepe, while Mrs. Price wore her wedding dress.

Toasts were proposed to the bride and groom of twenty-five years and to the bride and groom of a few hours by Mr. J. C. Ford, which met with spontaneous applause from the many guests present, also "The Farmer" through the courtesy of CJCA voiced the good wishes of the community. The presents were numerous and beautiful which testified to the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. Price hold in their community and surrounding districts. The bridegroom, Mr. Price, gave his bride a wrist watch and Miss Ellen Shaw a necklet of pearls.

Dancing took up a large portion of the evening. Mr. Alf Larson being assisted by other friends present. Songs were rendered during the evening by Mrs. C. Bateman, Mrs. H. Ackroyd, Mrs. R. Headon, Mr. J. C. Ford, Mr. Fred Ford, Mr. Jimmie Jackson, Mr. Dawson and others.

Rev. C. N. Bateman gave a few words of encouragement to the newly-married couple, and congratulated Mr. and Mrs. T. Shaw, and expressed appreciation for the wonderful hospitality extended to the guests present which included Mr. and Mrs H. Armitage and two children, Messrs. H. and J. Armitage of Sedgewick, Marshall Dawson, Miss Vera Harking, George Foreman, all of Sedgewick; Mr. and Mrs. George Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Alf Larson and Violet, Jack McFadden, Miss Mary Keble, R. Dempsey, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fletcher, all of Irma; Mr. and Mrs. H. Ackroyd and daughter of Wainwright, Messrs. Local Rebekahs Greet Alta. Assembly Pres.

Paying her annual official visit to the members of Adeline Rebekah Lodge, I.O.O.F., Mrs. Ida McCallum, of Edmonton, president of the Rebekah Assembly of Alberta, met with the local members on Thursday evening last in the I.O.O.F. hall.

During the evening the beautifully descriptive work of the Degree of Rebekah was exemplified by the local degree staff, their efforts receiving laudatory comments from the guest of the evening, who together with her district deputy, Miss M. Prosser, was given the order's official welcome.

Interspersed with the business of the evening, too, was the annual meeting of District No 5, at which Miss M. Prosser officiated, and included in reports given at this time were progress reports from both Irma and Wainwright lodges, as well as a short resume (by one of the members who attended) of the business affecting this branch of Odd Fellowship which transpired at the recent sessions of the Sovereign Grand Lodge held in New York city.

Following the evening session, a delightful luncheon was served at which the Noble Grand of the lodge, Miss L. Prosser capably filled the chair.

The honored guest gave a most interesting address on the work of the order, and its tenets, and in a later speech suitably thanked the members for the gift of a silver dish to mark the occasion of her visit, the presentation of which was made to her on behalf of the lodge by Miss M. Prosser.

Regular Meeting W.I. Sees Big Turn Out

The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. A. Harden on Tuesday October 13th, with a good turn out of both members and visitors. The meeting opened in the usual way with those present answering the roll call with current events; the responses given being both amusing and educational.

Plans were made for a whist drive which is to take place next month to aid in child welfare work. There were no reports from the sick or child welfare committees.

A dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Carsell and Miss Martin, and it must have been Mrs. Wright's lucky day as she won both the draw and the contest.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Michon on November 10th when a good attendance is looked for. The members are asked to remember to bring along a proverb with which to answer the roll at this meeting.

Changes Are Made In Canadian Radio

OTTAWA. Major W. E. Gladstone Murray, a native of Vancouver, B.C., graduate of McGill University in Montreal, Rhodes scholar for Quebec province in 1913 and for some years public relations officer with the British Broadcasting Corporation, is returning to Canada as general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the dominating figure in Canadian radio. The assistant general manager will be Dr. Augustin Frigon, of Quebec.

These appointments by the Government followed changes authorized by Parliament last winter. Under the system now abandoned radio broadcasting was managed by a commission of three members. In the new plan there is a board of governors of nine, serving without salary in an advisory capacity, but the real authority rests with the general manager. Under his jurisdiction come the eight broadcasting stations owned by the Government and the seventy-three others privately operated.

When the Easiest Way Is the Best Way ::::::

There are no two ways about it! Certainly the easiest way to get the most for every dollar you spend is to buy products that you know about through the advertisements in your local paper. You don't have to go out and look for buying opportunities. The advertisements bring them to you. And all you need do is consider the facts, compare values and decide on the soap or the sedan that best fits your judgment and your pocketbook.

Certainly the best way of making your money go farthest is to buy merchandise of proved value. Advertised merchandise. Merchandise that is bought and used by many people. Merchandise that must be superlatively good enough for its maker and your local retailer to keep calling it to the attention of people week after week and year after year.

This is the service—of convenience and profit—that the advertisements offer you. It will pay you to read them regularly and take advantage of everything they can do for you.

DOWN ON THE FARM

Down on the farm, 'bout half past four
I slip on my pants and sneak out the door;
Out of the yard I run like the dickens
To milk ten cows and feed the chickens.
Clean out the barn, curry Nancy and Jiggs
Separate the cream, and slop all the pigs.
Work two hours then eat like a Turk
And, by heck, I'm ready for a full day's work.

Then I grease the wagon and put on the rack,
Throw a jug of water in an old grain sack,
Hitch up the horses, hustle down the lane.
Must get the hay in for it looks like rain.
Look over yonder! Sure as I'm born,
Cattle on the rampage, cows in the corn.
Start across the medder, run a mile or two,
Heaving like I'm wind-broke, get wet clear through.
Get back to the horses, then for recompense
Nancy gets straddle the barbed-wire fence,
Joints all aching and muscles in a jerk,
I'm as fit as a fiddle for a full day's work.

Work all summer till winter is nigh,
Then figure up the books and heave a big sigh;
Worked all year, didn't make a thing,
Got less cash now that I had last spring.
Now, some people tell us that there ain't no hell,
But they never farmed so they can't tell.
When spring rolls 'round I take another chance
While the fringe growa longer on my old grey pants,
Give my spenders a hitch, my belt another jerk,
And, by heck, I'm ready for a full year's work. —Indiana Farmer-Post.

SHOWING STEADY IMPROVEMENT

OTTAWA. — Economic conditions in Canada maintained during the summer their tendency towards consistent improvement and in most of the major factors that go into the picture definite advances were made and held. The economic index for the second week of September advanced to the year's high of 117.1, as compared with 98.8 for the corresponding week of last year.

For the first seven months of the year business operations generally increased in volume and employment was more plentiful. The business index for the period was 107.5 as against 99.5 in the first seven months of last year.

Trade continues to make substantial gains. Exports for five months to the end of August, which are the first five months of the fiscal year, showed an advance of 32 per cent to British countries and 24 per cent to foreign countries.

BRUCE BARTON Says:

★ . . . Crazy Laws Then—and Now

In the year 1720 the British Parliament enacted a law providing that any woman who inveigled a man into marriage by means of scent, paints, cosmetic washes, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wool, iron stays, high-heeled shoes or bolstered hips should incur the penalty prescribed for witchcraft. Her marriage, if she were convicted, would stand null and void.

How low must have been the level of public intelligence in those days! Surely Englishmen then were yokels and dunces devoid of humor and the eye for beauty. But wait a minute! In the year 1720 the people of England had access to the wit and wisdom of Shakespeare and Izaak Walton, the philosophy of Francis Bacon and John Locke; the poetry of Herrick, Milton and Dryden.

Alive and active were Samuel Pepys, the famous diarist; Newton, one of the intellects of all time; Daniel Defoe, author of "Robinson Crusoe"; Jonathan Swift, wit and satirist who wrote "Gulliver's Travels"; Richard Steele and Joseph Addison, brilliant essayist, and Alexander Pope, whose "Essay on Man" sparkles with epigrams in rhyme. The people in such a country could not be wholly benighted.

Occasionally in our land of the free an old "blue law" is dug up and enforced; blue laws that prohibited nearly every kind of normal amusement and provided punishment for people who dared do anything on Sunday except go to church or sit in solemn contemplation. We wonder at the stupidity of folks who could permit the enactment of such laws or submit to their enforcement, yet these were the sturdy forefathers who conquered the wilderness and started this country on its way.

★ . . . These Are Hard, Hard Years

A woman went back to the 30th reunion of her college last June. Special efforts had been made to promote a large attendance and so a fine lot of middle aged women, some of them grandmothers, had their first chance for a visit since they were college girls looking through rose-tinted glasses to the conquest of the world.

They published a little book to which each contributed a brief biography. One woman took her copy home and showed it to a seventeen year old daughter who read it and passed it back to her mother with an exclamation of dismay. "What dull lives your classmates have had," she said. "Hasn't anything exciting happened to them?"

"Do you think your father and I have had a dull life," her mother asked.

"Oh, no," the young lady exclaimed.

"We have had it all," the mother continued. "All that really matters. Not much money; not fame, but we fell in love on a June evening; we married; we had all the thrill of finding a tiny apartment; of picking out our furniture and buying it piece by piece. There came a great day when we could scrape together enough for a little second hand car, and three great days when you and your sister and brother arrived."

The woman said that three things impressed her as she met these classmates after so many years. "Most lives are hard," she said. "Much harder than youth, thank God! can ever anticipate." In any college class only a handful are fortunate; for the rest a daily struggle. But there was a spiritual look in the eyes of those classmates and this was the second impressive thing. They had found something they did not have as girls. Something that seemed to come only with struggle.

The third impressive fact was that almost every one of her classmates however small the income, is sending her boys and girls to college. The eternal sacrifices of the older for the younger made, not courageously, but gladly, with the sure conviction that it is worthwhile.

Schiaparelli's favorite floral accents are nosegays of lacquered linen trimmed with a lacy edging recalling that on Valentines. She uses them on the lapels of day suits or to make an entire shoulder strap on evening frocks. Some of her mannequins wear a cluster of flowers at the nape of the neck with evening gowns.

Girls who totter about on spike-heeled shoes were verbally spanked by a well-known osteopath who declared: "In shoes with high heels, the toes are constantly over-extended. The body weight is carried on the ball of the foot, completely breaking down the transverse arch. The wearer proudly displays her high arch—high because the shank of the shoe fits like a glove and will not let it down. Yet she complains that it is agony for her to walk five minutes in a low shoe. The reason for this is that she has lost all muscle tone to aid her in the normal usage of her feet."

A tourmaline crystal, found at the base of a tree in Maine, led to the discovery of $50,000 worth of semi-precious stones in that area. Two amateur geologists, E. L. Hamlin and E. Holmes, were the lucky men. Tourmaline occurs in a variety of colors and is the national stone of Brazil. It is one of the few gems used in the industries, being made into tourmaline tongs for measuring the emanations from radium, in optical work, and in the radio industry.

Martha Washington had to send to England for candy. In 1816 there were a handful of confectioners in Philadelphia and New York. They made by hand the candy sold over their own counters . . . stick candy, molasses taffy, lozenges, and gum drops. Demand for candy has constantly increased. Today 1,500 factories produce more than a billion pounds of candy a year, or enough to supply each person in the United States with one pound a month.

WITH REGARD FOR FELLOWMEN'S HEALTH

At best spitting is a vulgar habit which can be done away with if we devote a little time and attention to the task. There is no cuspidor near my desk as I write this. I believe in the practice of what I preach.

The saliva is a necessary digestive fluid. It was not provided as a luxury but as a necessity. To waste it is to disturb the normal balance in our adjustment. The habit of spitting is a symptom indicating disease. We should be more considerate of our fellow-men than to wilfully expose them to throat and nose infections.

Sputum may contain many forms of bacteria; in fact, the "spitter" usually has an infected throat causing the expectoration. To spit on the sidewalks, or on the ground about the home, is to smear the premises with germs which, after drying, are ready for a voyage into some innocent respiratory tract. This is the way in which the dreaded "T. B." finds access to many lungs. In the same manner, influenza, diphtheria, pneumonia, scarlet fever, and many other ugly processes are started. To withhold your expectoration, or, if you cannot, then to deposit it on a cloth, piece of paper—something you can burn—is to be a humanitarian on a small but very noble scale.

To sneeze in your neighbor's face, exhibits idiocy, of course. To expectorate where it will dry and be carried to the throat of an unsuspecting victim, is equally ignorant, if not positively criminal. I dislike to arouse resentment on part of my friends, but I know I'm exactly right about this matter.

SAFEGUARD PURITY OF FARM WELL

Next in importance to the location of the farm well which should be far removed from likely sources of contamination are the protective measures which may be taken to safeguard the purity of water. The first step after digging or drilling well is to protect it from the entrance of the surface water. The well must have a good cover of concrete, stone or wood. If the well is deep, it should be fitted with a galvanized iron pipe reaching to the bottom, care being taken that the lower end of the pipe is efficiently sealed to the rock, also that the top of the pipe is sealed to the cover. Otherwise surface water may trickle down outside the pipe into the well.

If the well is shallow and wide, the walls of the well should be made impervious to an adequate depth. Ten or twelve feet is the usual depth recommended for the impervious wall which may be of concrete, puddled clay or cemented tile. The wall should be continued upwards one foot above the surface of the ground. By this means, surface water must filter through a depth of ten or twelve feet of earth before it can enter the well, and if the earth is in a reasonably clean condition, the water thus becomes purified.

Further safeguards are the turfing of the area immediately surrounding the well, fencing to prevent the approach of animals and refraining from using fertilizer within the vicinity.

TREES AVAILABLE FOR FARMERS

With reference to the all important function of tree planting in Alberta, it was learned in an interview given today by the Honourable C. C. Ross, Minister of Lands and Mines, that certain types of trees were available to farmers for transplanting and could be secured for this purpose on application to the Forestry Division of the Department.

The principal object in view, Mr. Ross stated, was to provide transplants for replacement of less valuable species in shelter belt and windbreaks, to introduce a more desirable product than the native variety found in the bluffs now in existence and to give protection to such products by planting them in stands of trees already established so as to provide necessary shade for the new species to ensure a healthy and permanent growth.

Available for planting in the spring of 1937, the Minister continued, will be limited quantities of white spruce, jack pine, green ash and elm. There will also be a small number of bur oak and Siberian larch with which the Forest Service has been experimenting successfully and of which a few may be given out for trial. In addition to these a large number of lodgepole pine and Scotch pine, trees possessing healthy root systems, are available for distribution. These trees are recommended for planting in this province.

To avoid any possible confusion, application forms should be secured from the Director of Forestry, Department of Lands and Mines, Edmonton, the Minister concluded. Forms properly filled out as to quantity and species required should, he added, be sent in to the Department before the end of the present year for trees required for planting next spring.

MODERN WOMEN
by CHARLOTTE ORMOND WILLIAMS
President of National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

Two married women teachers have just won a distinct victory in New Jersey. The news is particularly gratifying to the National Federation because we have opposed with all our strength discrimination because of marriage. The New Jersey Supreme Court, ruled in ordering the reinstatement of the two, Mrs. Elsie Hokanson and Mrs. Beatrice M. Sharp, both of Wildwood, N. J., that married school teachers cannot be discharged simply because they have husbands to support them. The teachers were discharged two years ago without a hearing and solely because they were married.

It seems astounding that one woman has been able to trace more than 5,000 missing sailors, but that is the record of Mrs. Janet Roper, house mother and head of the missing seamen's bureau of the Seaman's Church Institute of New York. She has devoted twenty-one years to this service and is called the angel of worried mothers and wives. Mrs. Roper has established contacts with superintendents of seamen's missions and operators of seamen's boarding houses all over the world. Each month she sends to them a bulletin containing the names, ages and nationalities of all the seamen she is trying to find. Mrs. Roper has worked at missions in Portland, Oregon and Gloucester, Mass.

Another advance for women in the business world is marked by the appointment of Miss Avis Lobdell as special representative of the executive vice president of the Union Pacific System. She is the daughter of Judge Charles E. Lobdell, a member of the First Federal Farm Loan Board under President Wilson.

Cuba is giving recognition to women in government appointments. The first to be so honored are Fina Forcade de Jackson, whom President Miguel Mariano Gomez has made assistant secretary in the Commerce Department, and Gloria Alonso de Vasconcelos, who is assistant secretary in the Education Department. Both women are politically prominent.

MINERAL PRODUCTION NEW HIGH FOR HALF YEAR

TORONTO.—Official figures show that the production of wealth from Canadian mines reached its highest point in the first half of the present year. The mineral output had a value of more than $33,000,000 which was 19 per cent in advance of the figure for the corresponding period of 1935.

In the six months gold production was 1,769,206 fine ounces, copper output 205,967,475 pounds, nickel 83,053,755 pounds, lead 180,866,815 pounds, zinc 157,969,552 pounds. All of these figures represented increases.

A new record for the complete year is considered a certainty. Mining today is Canada's most active industry, and important development work is being done in many areas.

Colds are not to be regarded lightly. They take more dollars and cents out of the workers' pocket than any other sickness. They are responsible for a greater loss of time from school and work than any other single cause.

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

WATCH THAT COLD

When that arch-enemy of humanity, the common cold, starts its yearly attack on the frail defenses of human vitality, there's just one wise thing to do -go to bed.

Colds take more money out of workers' pockets than do any other sicknesses. Colds are responsible for a greater loss of time from school and work than is any other single cause. These reasons are sufficient for a nation-wide effort to keep physically fit so that colds will be avoided.

At the first signs of a cold, soreness or dryness in the throat, sneezing, or a running nose, people should act. The best method of curing a cold is by rest. Very few colds would develop into serious illness if the person who has a cold were wise enough to take proper care of himself the first day or two—in other words, if he went to bed.

Take a laxative, if necessary. Drink plenty of cold water and eat lightly of simple, wholesome food. Breathing steam, if the doctor advises it, may relieve that stopped up feeling. At night, take a foot bath. As soon as you have rubbed yourself dry, cover up in bed with extra blankets so that you can "sweat the cold out of your system." A hot drink, such as hot lemonade, will help you perspire.

Colds, influenza and pneumonia are distinct diseases, and different germs play a part in each, but the early signs of a cold are often the same as the early signs of influenza and of other contagious diseases such as measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough, so it is very important to take care of what at first seems to be "just a cold."

To avoid colds one should:
(1) Keep physically fit.
(2) Stay away from people who have colds.
(3) Wear warm, dry clothing.

If you are unlucky enough to contract a cold:
(1) Stay away from other people.
(2) Go to bed and stay there until the cold is better.

THE NEW HOUSING PROJECT

Not the least among the benefits which are bound to accrue from the decision of Hon. Mr. Duncing, the Federal Minister of Finance, to issue credit to the extent of fifty million dollars or more for the purpose of the new housing scheme, is the up-lift which such a move is bound to give to lumber and building industry generally throughout the country.

By a perusal of the arrangements for these loans, it will plainly be seen that a great incentive to build—or to repair or extend existing homes—is bound to come to thousands who have hitherto felt the need of having such work done, but have been unable owing to lack of finances to consummate their desires.

It may well be stressed, too, that along with the additional assets which must accrue from better and more modern homes for some thousands of our people, must be reckoned the values of stocks turned over from numberless lumber-yards, stores, etc., all over the Dominion as well as the wide distribution of the wage-earners' share of the monies so spent in the building, modernising, repairing, and so forth.

Altogether, it looks like one of the best projects yet thought out to clear up the unemployment-relief question in very many localities, and there seems no reason why Wainwright shall not profit to the fullest extent by such a move.

KEEP THE ROADS OPEN

There is considerable agitation at the present time with regard to keeping the highways open for automobile traffic this winter. At the same time many public bodies are making preparations for keeping the roads were kept open this winter. So far we have not heard of any movement in this direction locally.

We have no doubt that if the roals were kept open this winter considerable benefit would be derived, not only from a business point of view but also socially. It would make travelling to town easier and quicker.

It would also make a great deal of difference in time of sickness; the doctor could be on the job quicker or the patient brought into hospital with the minimum of delay—a circumstance which sometimes means the difference between life and death. Several methods are available for this purpose and we would like to see something done about it this year. We would also like to hear from our readers on the matter, so fire away.

SCIENCE AND THE ARTS

Very few people ever stop to think of the effect of science and invention upon such things as art, literature and music. One of the big radio broadcasting companies has announced that it has arranged with a group of eminent composers to write musical compositions in symphony form, especially designed for radio use, so that an entire symphony can be broadcast within 40 minutes of time. This is a very definite change in an established art brought about by the needs of the most modern of all scientific development, the radio.

The late Brander Matthews, Professor of Dramatic Literature at Columbia University, pointed out some years ago the effect which the introduction of electric lights had had upon the form and manner of the drama. By making it possible for everyone in the audience to see clearly every facial expression of the actors, electric lighting eliminated the necessity of pantomine and violent gestures in order to convey the idea to the spectators; the drama became conversational in tone and quite different in substance after electricity replaced gas, which in turn had subdued the drama from the earlier days of candle light.

The very modern invention of photography, and particularly its widespread use by amateurs, has had a decided effect upon the arts of painting and drawing. Not many years ago it was considered a necessary part of every cultured person's education to be able to sketch from nature, but the amateur snapshot camera has changed all that. Today anybody can make a picture which is far more real and lifelike than the greatest work of the greatest artists of the past, while recent advances in color photography and the application of the principles of artistic composition by photographers seem to point toward a time when painting itself will become obsolete.

When you stop to think of it, all of civilized man's daily habits, customs and points of view are constantly being changed by the introduction of new scientific discoveries and their practical application in new implements and devices. Yet there are people who look backward longingly to the "good old days," which as a matter of reality were the bad old days.

VALUE OF THE COUNTRY WEEKLY

That weekly community newspapers throughout Canada are performing an important function is so well known that it scarcely need be repeated here. The best of these country weeklies are giving such a fine service in local news that they are being closely read by the people of the community—and this is a service that large metropolitan newspapers cannot possibly give in these localities. This judgment is backed by no less an authority than Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors Corporation, who recently made the statement that the community weekly was the most thoroughly read consumers' newspaper in the United States.

One Canadian weekly reports that a large Canadian food corporation also paid a nice compliment to the town weekly newspapers when it recently said that its company had come to the conclusion that the small community paper offered a most effective advertising medium from the standpoint of the country district consumer. It declared that a recent advertising campaign conducted in these newspapers had proved this fact as the resulting sales per capita were much greater than those obtained from similar campaigns in daily papers in larger centres. The cost, too, was much less in the weeklies.

The main factor in holding subscribers and advertising is reader interest, and it is on this that the value of any newspaper is judged. The well-edited country weeklies are giving the local news which is of first interest to the community and, based on this yardstick, Canada has a great many good ones.—"Canadian Grocer."

America's Oil Industry Real Big Investment

About $12,500,000,000 is invested in the oil industry in the United States and Canada, and of this, from $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 is in transportation.

No other industry even approaches this in proportion to its investment in transportation.

The chief movement of crude oil is by pipeline and tankers of gasoline and kerosene by rail. The rail roads handled in 1934 some 1,140,000 tank carloads of gasoline.

In a single year petroleum and its products produced $243,156,000 or 8.8 per cent of all carload freight revenue of the American railroads. That compares with $224,000,000 from livestock and its products; with $182,000,000 from grains; and $141,000,000 from anthracite. Only bituminous coal earned as much revenue as the petroleum group.

Possibility of lower cost roads that will cost less to build and less to maintain is being investigated by western road engineers in view of the proposed Dominion-Provincial relief work programs in which highway building is to be a big item.

In the general field of road building there has been a marked difference in construction costs since 1930. The problem is also one in which the interest of the general public is as keen as that of the engineers.

Even though harassed by trying times of the depression and notwithstanding the fact that roads have cost a lot of money, people of the western provinces are beginning to think they have been one of the best investments their governments have undertaken. They have borne fruit many fold. The provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are now known on the North American continent as attractive places for people to go. Already the tourist figures for 1936 are indicating big business for this year. To keep it, good roads are necessary. As they become known the western provinces are becoming singularly attractive to people of the south. Year by year they are coming in increasing numbers to enjoy the rivers, lakes, and weather of the prairies.

Canadian Mining Town Nothing to 2,000 Year

MONTREAL.—A year ago a few log cabins in deep woods marked the settlement of Bourlamaque, in Northern Quebec's mining area. Today Bourlamaque has 2,000 people, more than 100 good houses, a fine school, a modern business block, a cinema theatre which cost £13,000, and a hotel is being built at a cost of £20,000. Streets are being laid out, and a population of 5,000 within a few months is expected.

Bourlamaque is in the centre of rich gold areas and the district is swarming with prospectors. The railroad is twenty miles distant, and much of the transportation is by aeroplane.

WHAT IS A BOY?

He is a person who is going to carry on what you have started.

He is to sit right where you are sitting and attend when you are gone to those things you think are so important.

You may adopt all the policies you please but how they will be carried out depends upon him.

Even if you make leagues and treaties, he will have to manage them.

He is going to sit at your desk in Parliament, and occupy your place on the Supreme Bench.

He will assume control of your cities, towns and nation.

All your work is for him, and the fate of the nations and of humanity is in his hands.

So it might be well to pay him some attention.—Author unknown.

Here and There

Patrons of Days of Old Canadian Pacific Railways and Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's Minister of Railways, travel in style were recently and lend a period of historic interest. Among those were Donald A. Smith, Lord Strathcona, James J. Hill, West Coast railroad builder, James Ross, chief engineer for the past half century with the construction of Canada's first transcontinental railways. The party actually comprised a group of film players portraying the historic characters in the latest board-room sequence of "The Great Barrier", Gaumont British picture depicting the strenuous railway construction days fifty years ago.

Says Gene Sarazen, one time world's champion golfer, writing of the Banff Springs Hotel course at the famous resort in the Rockies:—"That course of Banff is everything you said. Miss Helen Hicks and I played it against two guests at the hotel and we were beaten. With a huge gallery it may seem funny to hear we simply couldn't keep our minds on the game—the scenery was simply too much."

The first 1937 world cruise to set out from New York will be the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain which will sail January 9 for a voyage of 125 days, covering 30,000 miles and visiting 29 ports in 22 different countries. Among these countries are Palestine, Egypt, India, Ceylon, Malay Archipelago, the Philippines, China, Japan, Hawaii and back to New York via California, the Panama Canal and Havana.

Canada's first complete semi-streamlined air-conditioned train, built for the Canadian Pacific Railway, now in operation with four units in different parts of the Dominion, has been placed on inspection at a number of points across the country and has aroused high praise and enthusiasm on the part of the hundreds of thousands of Canadians who have seen it. In Montreal alone 60,000 spectators went through it in the four days it was on inspection at the Windsor station and the same interest was displayed everywhere else. These units will be in operation between Toronto and Detroit, Montreal and Quebec, and Edmonton and Calgary.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and other delegates to the League of Nations Conference at Geneva sailed from Quebec in September in the Canadian Pacific flagship Empress of Britain. Accompanying the Premier was Hon. Raoul Dandurand, Government leader in the Senate and Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of Labor.

Captain George Gould, new skipper of the Empress of Russia, made his first trip as master of the vessel early in September. It is his first command of a Pacific Empress, though he has served the fleet in all official capacities from fourth officer to staff-captain during the past 23 years.

Last of three motor parties visiting Canada this year, 14 British automobilists arrived recently at Quebec on the Empress of Britain. The motorcade under the organizer Graham Lyons, drove from Quebec to Montreal and will visit Ottawa, Toronto, London, Detroit, Cleveland, Washington and New York.

While Mr. Lee Wells was returning to town on Saturday night last something went wrong with the lights on his car with the result that he crashed head-on into a team driven by Mr. H. Massie. However, outside of the few cuts received by Mr. Wells and the damage done to the car, the accident had no real serious results.

Beautiful Cruises Christmas Holidays

WINNIPEG, Man.—Many people are confronted with the problem "Where shall we go this Christmas?" and as a result the Canadian National Steamships have arranged for the festive season a choice of several cruises from Boston to the Caribbean Sea, according to R. Creelman, passenger traffic manager, western lines.

"These cruises offer a complete change from the environment of the north and take the vacationist to beautiful resorts of perpetual summer, so remote from the everyday humdrum world," stated Mr. Creelman.

"Every effort will be made to make these voyages a real holiday event, with special preparations on board to make the festive season a memorable one for every passenger," said Mr. Creelman. "Christmas and New Year's Day may be enjoyed as thoroughly aboard a 'Lady' liner as by one's own fireside. In addition to all the good things which adorn the table for a delectable dinner, efforts of all the officers of the ship are combined to make the voyage a delightful one for all aboard, and when the traveller steps ashore, the joyous spirit of native life is in evidence everywhere throughout the colonies. Hence the traveller desiring a complete change, or the lonely person far away from home at the festive season, may enjoy all the jovial hospitality typical of good fellowship, both on ship and ashore," he declared.

The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. Strange,
Director "Crop Testing Plan"

The wealth, welfare and prosperity of farmers, and indeed of all of us, in Western Canada depend mainly upon the sale each year to foreign countries of large quantities of Canadian wheat at satisfactory prices.

Between 200 and 300 million bushels a year, it seems to me, will have to be exported if a reasonable standard of living for our producers and other people is to be assured.

Our large annual sales in the past have depended upon the buyers in no less than 72 different countries demanding or "wanting" Canadian wheat. Our problem, then, can be stated very simply. It is that somehow we must induce the buyers of 72 countries to "want" between 200 and 300 million bushels of Canadian wheat each year, and to pay a reasonable price for it. Can this be done? Yes, I at least believe it can, provided for one thing that we maintain, and if possible increase, the present margin of quality or "strength" that Canadian wheat enjoys over the "strength" of all other wheats in the world. But we must remember that meanwhile other countries are steadily improving the quality of their own native wheats. Canada, therefore, will undoubtedly have to increase the efforts she is now making in order even to maintain her present superiority in wheat quality.

Make-Believe Bride

by Ruth Harley

SYNOPSIS: Maris Trevor is discouraged because Rod O'Rorke spends all his money developing an invention which he hopes will provide an income so that they can marry. Maris thinks they should enjoy the present rather than deny themselves for the future. She becomes uncertain of her love for Rod. Perhaps there would be more happiness with someone else . . .

That was soon after she'd met Rod and he was perfect in her eyes. How she had wished then that one day he'd ask her to marry him, for then she thought surely it would be heaven to have a husband like him. She smiled in the dark. Now Rod had asked her to marry him, and she had refused. Had she made a fatal mistake? Was it better to marry within your own class and rise or sink together? But, worn out with all the strain, she fell asleep, a smile on her lips as though she were still at one with Rod, loving him with all the fervor of her youth.

"Say Maris, I guess you made a tremendous hit last night. Look what the papers say about you." Maris was entering the correspondence room, and Milly darted to her side with the morning papers.

Maris' cheeks were rosy as the different salesmen came up and told her what they thought of her presentation. But all their words of praise meant nothing for her, for she felt that what Stan might say to her would make a big difference in her life.

Presently Miss Riggs hurried down the aisle. "Mr. Stanley wants you in his office right away," she said breathlessly.

"All right," answered Maris nonchalantly, but, beneath her apparent calm, her heart was beating like a sledge hammer. What would he say to her? Had those girls aired their opinions to him, or did they despise him and blame him as they blamed her?

She opened the door of his office, and he rose up quickly, and taking her hand in his, shook it enthusiastically. "Well Maris, you put it over big and I'm mighty proud of you. But where did you vanish to last night? Didn't you know I was going to take you home?" the caressing note in his voice seemed to blot out all the harsh accusations that the girls had made against her.

"Oh, I never thought of that. It's very kind of you to have thought of such a thing, but I'm sure you'd plenty to see to, and I got home all right."

"Well, there was quite a lot to see to, but I did think after the affair was over I might have a chance to tell you how splendidly you had done. But maybe you'll let me show my appreciation tonight? How about having dinner with me and then dancing afterwards?"

"Well, you're sure a queer pair. I was just telling him what a hit you made last night. But there, I guess I'm in the way, I'll go in the kitchen so you two love-birds can have a chance to make things up."

Quickly Rod took a step toward Maris. "Oh, sweetheart, I know you refused to marry me, and maybe there's someone else, but now that I'm going to be well fixed financially, won't you change your mind? Won't you marry me, darling?" and he held out his hands to her.

For a moment, looking at him, Maris wished that she might rush to the security of his arms, might pillow her head on his breast and tell him all the bitterness she had endured—but—no, it would never do. She could not meet his ardent gaze. Her glance dropped to the tablecloth and she nervously pleated and unpleated the snowy surface. Why had Rod to come here this night of all nights?

She loved him, and yet something seemed to be urging her on to this adventure with Stan. Surely there was no harm to it. Anyway she would never want Rod to think that she had changed her mind and was ready to marry him just because he had made some money.

"Say Maris, I guess you made a tremendous hit last night."

The color dyed Maris' cheeks and she could not keep the sparkle out of her eyes as she said, "You don't have to feel you must reward me for what I did. I had a good time wearing that lovely gown. I enjoyed the affair immensely," she added as though she would convince herself she was really speaking the truth.

"But surely you won't deny me the pleasure of having you as my guest tonight? There's something else I want to talk over with you, and well, there never seems to be time for anything but conferences and so forth in the office. Tell me I may call for you tonight." His eyes seemed to burn into hers, and quickly banishing Patsy's words of warning and her own new antagonism against his set, she said: "Very well, I'll be glad to go with you."

"That's right," he said, but something seemed to jar her. Had she been too ready to acquiesce to his wishes?

As she returned to her desk, she had a strange sort of disturbed feeling. She'd never noticed his lips before. Were they smiling at her? But she shook herself. She was getting fanciful. That surely showed she wasn't accustomed to late nights! Well, she must change all that.

As Maris opened the door of her apartment she heard the murmur of voices, and when she crossed the threshold Patsy called out, "Is that you Maris? Come on in."

"Oh, hullo Rod," she said as he rose. "What's new?" A little shadow darkened her eyes.

"Gosh Maris, aren't you going to kiss your boy friend, and congratulate him? He's put his gadget over and soon he'll be rolling in wealth."

"That's fine," she said, but she remained standing at the other side of the table, while the light that had leaped to Rod's eyes as he heard her enter, seemed to be extinguished.

"Oh, you don't know what you've started. But say, here we are! We'll have dinner here, and then take in a night club or two. You'd like that?"

"Sure I would."

"Well, little girl, there isn't a thing I wouldn't do for you after you were such a peach helping me out the way you did."

"Oh, it was nothing, Mr. Fayson."

"Say, how do you get that way? I'm 'Stan' to you now and always. And don't you forget it, you little bit of sugar."

"You mean I should call you 'Stan'?" asked Maris.

"Sure I don't want no 'misters' around here and just remember that," he announced as they entered a hotel together.

"Now," he said after they were seated at a rather inconspicuous table, "what do you like, Maris? Anything you want is yours for the asking."

"Oh, why don't you order for me?" she answered, amazed at the magnificence of the jewels and dress of the women around them.

"Well, if you'd like me to, I will. I rather pride myself on knowing how to order a swell dinner."

"All right, I love surprises," Maris answered, relieved that she had escaped that ordeal, for never in all her life had she dined at such a sumptuous hotel.

"Well, that little thing's attended to. What brand do you smoke?"

Maris named a popular brand.

"Here they are," replied Stan, taking a jewel-studded cigarette case from his pocket.

"That's one thing we have in common," and he laughed rather vacuously, as though he had got off a clever crack.

"Like to dance now?" he asked as the crooning call of the orchestra was luring people from their tables.

"No, not yet," answered Maris, realizing all too well how out of place her simple frock would look amongst the gorgeously dressed women who were on the floor.

"All right, little one. Well here comes the eats," and Maris surprised an almost wolfishly-hungry look in Stan's eyes as the waitress put the food before him. Somehow the picture of Rod rose before her, but quickly she banished it.

The very novelty of her experience intrigued Maris as the dinner proceeded from course to course but she was glad when, about ten o'clock, they decided to seek amusement elsewhere.

"This whole street's full of speakeasies," Stan said as he cruised on. "I wonder which you'd like best, and he turned to her with a rather foolish grin on his face.

"Oh, the one with the best orchestra," she answered quickly. "I love to dance!"

"You do? Well, here's the place," and, drawing his car to the curb, he stepped out and helped her onto the street.

When they entered the "speak" Maris had a strange feeling that she had left herself outside and that it was another person who crossed the threshold in her clothes.

Immediately Stan secured a table, then ordered some drinks. For a moment Maris hesitated as she glanced at the cocktail before her. She had rarely tasted liquor.

As she hesitated, Stan said, "Better try some of mine," and asking the waiter for a glass, he poured out a generous drink from his monogrammed, silver flask. "It's the Grand MacNeish. How d'ye like it?"

Maris raised the glass to her lips, and took a sip. "I guess it's okay," she said uncertainly.

"Sure it is," he answered, filling his own glass again and drinking the liquor in one swallow.

At last, when they left, Maris wondered how he could drive after all he'd drunk, but the night air seemed to have a sobering effect on him. When they neared home, he seemed to be perfectly level-headed, as he quickly broached a new plan he had for stressing the style end of the business.

"How'd you like to work with the stylist?"

"I'd love it."

"Better than typing?"

"A thousand times better," she declared, glancing at him with sparkling eyes.

"Then we'll have to see about that tomorrow—or, I guess today."

"I've had a wonderful evening, Stan. I've enjoyed every minute," she said as he walked to the door of her apartment house.

"Well, we'll have another, sweetness," and before she realized what he was doing she felt his lips on hers.

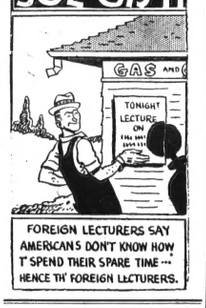

"Oh, Stan," she said, the color dyeing her cheeks.

Quickly he took her in his arms and raised her face to his. "You're not angry with me, are you, loveliest?"

She shook her head slowly.

BEWITCHING DISHES FOR HALLOWE'EN

Hallowe'en menus demand colorful and usually informal effects. Individual Cottage Salad reflects the Hallowe'en spirit in both color and appearance. The flavor interest of ripe olives, pickle relish, and tomato catsup against the background of gelatinized cheese is hard to top.

Here also are a delicious steak with limas, a top-over cake that touches the spot, baked apples with nuts and wine, Hallowe'en cookies that seem made to order:

Individual Cottage Salads

1 cup sliced ripe olives
1½ cups cottage cheese
½ teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons tomato catsup
1⅓ cup pickle relish
½ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
Shredded lettuce

Combine olives, cheese, salt, catsup, pickle relish, and mayonnaise, and blend. Moisten gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water; beat slowly into cheese mixture. Pour into individual molds and place in refrigerator until firm. Unmold onto beds of crisp, shredded lettuce. Top with mayonnaise if desired. Serves 6.

Flank Steak with Limas

2 cups cooked, dried limas
1 flank steak
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon onion, chopped
2 tablespoons fat
1 cup hot water
Bit of bay leaf
1 teaspoon salt

Heat fat, add onion and steak. Cook until brown, then add remaining ingredients. Cover, simmer 2 hours or until meat is tender. Add limas and cook 10 minutes. Serve meat with border of limas.

Ginger Spear Top-over Cake

½ cup butter
1 cup brown sugar
1¾ cups pastry flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup sugar
1 egg
¾ cup molasses
½ cup sour or buttermilk
8 or 10 slices of canned Hawaiian pineapple sliced in spear-like shapes
½ cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
¼ cup butter

Melt ¼ cup butter in a 10-inch iron frying pan or an 8½ inch square deep cake pan. Add brown sugar and stir until melted. Sift flour, baking powder, soda, ginger, and cinnamon. Cream butter and sugar, stir in egg, molasses, milk and dry ingredients. Arrange pineapple slices in melted butter and brown sugar; heat. Pour in cake mixture. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 to 375 degrees F. for about 35 minutes. When done, loosen cake from the sides of the pan with a spatula, invert on a large serving plate. Serve hot with whipped cream. 8 servings.

Baked Apples with Brazil Nuts and Wine

6 apples
2/3 cup ground Brazil nuts
1¼ cups sugar
1 cup hot water
¼ cup white wine

Select apples of even size. Core and peel one inch of skin from top. Fill cores with ground Brazil nuts and put in baking pan. Add one cup of sugar dissolved in hot water and bake about three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven, 375 degrees F. until apples are tender. Baste several times during cooking. Sprinkle tops of apples with sugar and place under broiling flame for two minutes, until sugar is dissolved. Add wine and serve hot or thoroughly chilled.

Hallowe'en Cookies

2 cups sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or other shortening
2/3 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 egg, unbeaten
2 squares unsweetened chocolate melted
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup broken walnut meats

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda, and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually creaming until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well; then chocolate and blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Add vanilla and nuts. Drop from teaspoon on ungreased baking sheet and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 12 minutes, or until done. Frost with your favorite white or an orange frosting.

MAGIC WITH MINCE MEAT

Mince pies used to be a special holiday treat—the crowning triumph of weeks of effort. But nowadays mince meat also qualifies as one of the most versatile and economical treats on the housewife's easy-to-make list. A nine-ounce package of dry mince meat is the short-cut basis for a variety of delicious pies, fruit cakes, cookies and puddings.

Economy Fruit Cake

1 (9 oz.) package dry mince meat and ⅓ cup water boiled almost dry
½ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup raisins
¼ cup nut meats, chopped
1/3 cup milk

Break the dry mince meat into pieces. Add cold water. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to a brisk boil; continue boiling for three minutes, or until mixture is practically dry. Allow to cool. Cream shortening and brown sugar. Add eggs, one at a time and beat vigorously until smooth and creamy. Add cooled mince meat, raisins and nut meats and blend. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt and sift again. Add alternately with milk to first mixture. Pour into greased loaf cake pan (4 by 8 by 2½). Bake 45 minutes in a slow oven (300 degrees F.).

Note: Chopped dates or figs may be substituted for the raisins.

Pineapple Mince Meat Pie

1 (9 oz.) package dry mince meat and ½ cup water, boiled almost dry
2 cups freshly cooked or canned shredded pineapple, drained
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons flour
1 egg

Pie crust

Break the dry mince meat into pieces. Add cold water. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to a brisk boil; continue boiling for three minutes or until mixture is practically dry. Cool. Combine mince meat and pineapple. Add lemon juice, and flour blended with well-beaten egg. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry and fill with mince meat mixture. Arrange lattice of pastry strips across top. Moisten edge of pie with cold water and finish with narrow strip of pastry around edge of pie. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) 10 minutes; then decrease heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake 30 minutes longer.

TODAY & TOMORROW

by Frank Parker Stockbridge

MUSIC . . . down the furrow

One of the early American philosophers—I think it was Thoreau—wrote: "Give me the man who sings at his work."

A modern version might be "give me the man who listens to the radio at his work." Not all of us can sing, and some of us work at trades in which music would be an annoyance, but the general idea that music is helpful in getting through the drudgery of the day's work is sound.

I don't know how many cars have radios, but "there's music in the air" along almost every country road and city street. The latest application of this idea is the radio-equipped farm tractor. Doubtless the furrows seems shorter when they are ploughed to the accompaniment of "If This Isn't Love."

CORKS . . . shortage

One result of the civil war in Spain has been to threaten a world shortage of corks. Cork is the bark of a particular kind of oak tree which is cultivated principally in Spain. After the tree is a few years old its thick bark can be stripped off every year without hurting the tree. Some Spanish cork groves have been so "harvested" for hundreds of years.

Years ago Leland Stanford tried to introduce the cork oak in California. Some of the trees he planted are producing as well as the Spanish trees do, but American farmers did not have the patience to wait for results during the several years it takes a tree to begin to yield cork in commercial quantities.

Germany has just enacted a decree forbidding the use of corks in bottles. Only homegrown wood stoppers may be used. That has nothing to do with the cork shortage, however; it's just one of Hitler's schemes to keep German money in Germany.

CHICKEN . . . all white

I don't always believe everything I hear, and I confess that I am a bit skeptical about a new scientific discovery reported a few days ago. The report is that a poultry farmer in Illinois has found that by exposing his checkens to ultra-violet rays instead of sunlight he can produce fowls which have only white meat when cooked for the table.

If true, this will be welcome news to the chicken-eaters who always want "a slice off the breast, please."

For my part, I seem to lack enthusiasm. My choice, when my family gives me the option as what part of the chicken I want, is the "second joint." That wouldn't taste natural if it were white meat.

GOLD . . . worth hunting

The world scarcity of gold, and its consequent high price resulting from the devaluation of so many of the world's currencies, has been a boon to gold miners everywhere. Ores which didn't pay to work at their old prices now yield a handsome profit.

Canada has a real gold-mining boom. More than 125 mills are now extracting gold from Canadian ore. Last year about nine million tons of ore were milled, yielding about 2,600,000 ounces of gold. The first half of this year, the gold output of the Dominion was even larger.

"Gold is where you find it." It pays, these days, to hunt for gold. At least twice as much as is now available is needed, to bring the world's finances back to normal.

Go out and find yourself a gold mine, young fellow.

VETERANS . . . the G.A.R.

The Grand Army of the Republic held its last parade a couple of weeks ago. I remember when the men of the G.A.R. were in their forties, and 300,000 of them turned out for a great parade in Washington. Now the last handful of the survivors of the armies of the North in the war between the states are men of 90 or so.

The American Legion today is where the G.A.R. was fifty years ago. For thirty years or more the G.A.R. dominated the politics of America, and stood for a pension system on which we will be paying for another forty years.

It looks to me as if the Legion was headed in the same direction, with the exception that the G.A.R. boys of the 1880's were Republicans with few exceptions.

Don't overeat. Eat slowly. Don't study your food too much at meals. Don't eat when tired or worried. Enjoy your meals. Be regular in eating. These are health rules for the table.

Growing Bulbs In The House For Winter Bloom

When the last rose of summer or of late autumn, with the variety of other flowers that bloom out of doors, have faded and gone it is possible, at a very nominal cost and with little effort, to have flowers in the home for several weeks during the winter months. These blooms, in quite a large variety of colour can be provided by bulbs. To get them to flower successfully it is necessary to start them for several weeks in darkness in a cool cellar. A first essential to successful bulb culture is to make sure that the bulbs themselves are of good quality. It is best to buy them early in the season when they are likely to be more vigorous than those which have been lying about the store for several weeks. Good bulbs should be quite firm and heavy in comparison to their size and of good size according to their variety.

The bulbs should be potted as soon as obtainable from the seed store or dealer. By removing the pots from the cellar, after the bulbs have rooted, at intervals of ten days or two weeks a succession of bloom over a long period can be obtained.

In an article on growing bulbs for winter bloom, Miss Isabella Preston, Specialist in Ornamental Gardening, Horticultural Division, Central Experimental Farm, Dominion Department of Agriculture, begins by stating that some bulbs can be grown in water alone, in prepared peat and in soil. The varieties that do best in water are Chinese Sacred Lily, Paper White Narcissus and Hyacinths. The first two are grown in bowls and the bulbs are kept in place with small stones. A small piece of charcoal should be placed in the bottom to help keep the water clean. Hyacinths are grown in special glasses which are shaped so that the bulbs are held just above the water.

Prepared fibre compost can be obtained from seed firms and it is prepared for use. Its chief advantage over earth is that it is used in fancy water tight bowls. The fibre should be made slightly moist and a layer laid at the base of the bowl. The bulbs should be arranged on this and the fibre filled in around them. Enough space should be left at the top so that water can be added easily. The number of bulbs used depends on the size of the bowl. They should not be allowed to touch each other or the sides of the bowl. Daffodils, Tulips and Hyacinths can all be grown in fibre.

BULBS IN SOIL

The most inexpensive way to grow bulbs is in clay pots in soil. The ordinary garden soil, if not too heavy, can be used. Heavy soil should be mixed with sand and leaf soil in order to make it porous. The pots must be clean and new ones should be soaked in water and dried before using. Pieces of broken pots should be laid over the hole at the bottom to insure good drainage and well mixed slightly moist soil placed in the pot. It should be filled about one-third full and packed down. The bulbs are placed on this and the pot filled up to one-half inch of the top with soil. It should be well shaken down and pressed sufficiently so that no air holes are left but not packed down too hard. The bulbs should be planted deep enough so that the tips of the bulbs show above the surface of the soil except Hyacinths which should have about one-third above the soil. After being planted in the pots they should be watered and put in a cool cellar. The bulbs which bloom in the shortest time after potting are French Roman Hyacinths. These have small sprays of flowers and are white in colour. If planted in September and kept in a moderately warm place, they will bloom in early December. They must not be put in a cold place for rooting. As they are quite expensive and the flowers small they are recommended only for very early bloom. They can be grown either in fibre or soil.

HYACINTHS

Dutch Hyacinths come in various colours and the bulbs can be planted singly in four-inch pots or three in a six inch pot. Only one variety should be grown in a pot so that they will bloom at the same time. The pots may be placed outdoors and buried in cinders for a few weeks until freezing weather sets in and then they should be placed in a cool, not too dry cellar, or they may be put at once into a dark corner of the cellar at a temperature of about 40 degrees F. If the pots are buried in sand or cinders, they will keep more evenly moist than if left uncovered. In a month or six weeks, examine the pots and if the roots are beginning to show through the bottom of the pot and the leaves to push up from the soil, they can be brought up to the light. The change from the cold cellar to the living room should be gradual if possible. It will be found that Hyacinths do better if grown slowly. If they are brought into heat too soon, the flowers may begin to open before the stem grows. If this happens a six inch collar of brown paper placed around the bulb will encourage the stem to lengthen.

DAFFODILS

Daffodils are perhaps the most satisfactory bulbs for the amateur to grow in the house and the following inexpensive varieties are attractive:

Yellow Trumpet—Golden Spur, very early; Emperor; King Alfred and Van Waveren's Giant.

Bicolor Trumpet—Mme. Plemp; Victoria and Empress.

Incomparabilis—Sir Watkin; Lucifer.

Barril—Conspicuous; Bath's Flame (this is expensive but very fine).

Poetaz (flowers in clusters—Klondyke; Orange Cup and Laurens Koster.

TULIPS

The early flowering varieties of Tulips force more easily than Darwins and the following varieties generally do well:

Early Singles:

Red—Crimson Brilliant, Vermilion Brilliant.

Yellow—Chrysolora, Goldfinch.

Pink—Cottage Maid, Ibis.

Red with yellow margin—Keizer Kroon.

Orange—Fred Moore, Prince of Austria.

Darwin tulips take much longer to bloom than early flowering varieties and must be grown in a temperature of around 50 degrees F until the flower buds are quite large.

Pink—Princess Elizabeth.

Red—Rol d'Island, Wm. Pitt.

Mauve—Wm. Coupland.

FREESIAS

Freesias have sweet scented flowers and can be grown in the house. The bulbs should be planted early in September and grow best in a temperature of about 50 degrees F. The stems are frequently too weak to hold the flowers and should be tied to thin stakes so as to keep them straight.

It is well to remember that the soil or fibre must never be allowed to dry out but over watering, especially in water tight containers, must be avoided. Gas from furnace or cook stove may cause the buds to die. Too hot and dry air encourages insects and also causes buds to die. Great changes of temperature are harmful, frost will damage leaves and flowers.

This Week in Washington

While Washington's attention is not in the least diverted from the presidential campaign, consideration is being given to what is going to happen after election, no matter who may be elected. For, on the question of who will be the next President of the United States, the best-informed political prophets here are frankly throwing up their hands. So many factors which have not been present in previous presidential campaigns enter into the picture this year that nobody feels quite sure that the usual signs which have heretofore been relied upon will prove reliable in 1936.

But whether Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Landon is elected the mill of the Supreme Court will grind on as if there had been no political campaign. It is not expected that any important decisions will be handed down until after election, but from then on there will be a succession of decisions on ten, at least, of the acts of the 73rd and 74th Congress, es whose constitutionality has been challenged.

The principal laws under attack are the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the Frazier-Lemke Farm Mortgage Moratorium measure, the 1933 "Truth in Securities" act, the Public Utility Holding Company act and the right of PWA to make loans for publicly owned hydro-electric plants.

The Challenged Laws

The Wagner Labor Relations Act, which established the National Labor Relations Board and guaranteed the right of collective bargaining to all employees, has been challenged by the Associated Press and by the Bradley Lumber Company, of Arkansas. The lower courts have upheld the constitutionality of the act. Now the Supreme Court is to pass upon their rulings.

Several power companies have questioned the constitutionality of government loans for publicly owned electric light and power systems. Their complaint is that this puts the government into unfair competition with private business. The action of the Supreme Court on this and the Public Utility Holding Company act is expected to bring to a head the conflict between the Federal Government and public utilities.

A step toward bringing about better relations between the Government and privately owned power companies was taken the other day by President Roosevelt, who called in representatives of important power companies for a private conference at the White House.

While no public information was given out as to what was discussed, it is understood here that the effort was to find a reasonable rule to govern the distribution of power produced at government dams in the Tennessee Valley and elsewhere.

The right of the government to distribute this power has been challenged, though its right to generate electric energy as an incident to the construction of dams for flood and navigation control has been upheld by the Supreme Court.

Farm and Security Acts

The Frazier-Lemke Act which granted a three-year moratorium against foreclosure of farm mortgages has been challenged by the Phoenix Joint Stock Land Bank of Kansas City, which has carried the request to the Supreme Court after adverse ruling by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Supreme Court decided last year that an earlier Frazier-Lemke Act of similar intent was unconstitutional. The present act was passed in an effort to accomplish the same result by constitutional means.

No formal action to challenge the constitutionality of the Social Security Act has yet reached the Supreme Court, although that is a very important act of the 74th Congress of which a constitutional test is expected sooner or later.

In the meantime the Social Security Board is preparing to carry out the provisions of the Act especially that part of it dealing with old age insurance, which does not take effect until January 1, 1937.

The gigantic task upon which a huge staff of clerks has been at work for nearly a year is that of checking and recording the names ages, and employment records of some 26,000,000 workers in industry and business.

Immediately after election every postmaster is to be furnished with the Social Security Board's list for his community and will be called upon to check upon the present whereabouts of every person whose name appears on the list.

Starting January 1, every employer will be required to pay to the government a tax of one per cent of his total payroll, except for such parts of it as run above $3,000 a year for any particular employee. Beginning at the same date, every worker earning up to $3,000 a year will be required to pay an income tax of one per cent of his total salary or wages. This income tax must be deducted from the pay check or wage envelope by the employer and turned over to the government.

Out of the proceeds of this payroll tax the act provides for retirement pensions beginning at the age of 65. The expected attacks upons its constitutionality are based upon the fact that the tax is not a general tax but applies only to workers in business and industry and is not required from workers in agricultural, shipping, domestic service, members of charitable, scientific and other non-profit organizations, or persons who are self-employed, such as professional men.

Another ground is that the proceeds of this tax are not distributed for general welfare, but only for the specific benefit of the particular classes who are taxed, so that there is no provision in the law for old age insurance benefits for a very large part of the population of the United States.
